In a three page report (first page seen below), Childs noted, $\hat{a}Gl\hat{a}G^{\dagger}$ the bands have been waiting for the guns and it was every intention to give them either to Eason or CameronâG¦âGL but Ripley had not turned the appropriate guns over to the arsenal for the work. Ripley, on the other hand, claimed heâGLd already sent the guns where the work was to be done which would save time in the process. Childs, somewhat resentfully added, âGlThere can be no proper reason for the Easons not working as well for me as for General RiplevâG|âGLĊRiplev had Childs arrested, citing the failure to fill valid requisitions with the supply on hand. And of course the bands went over to Eason. CFor what it was worth. Beauregard fully recognized the conflicting issues, noting, $\hat{a}Gl\hat{a}Gl$ the chiefs of ordnance of this department and district, relying too much on the supplies of the arsenal, of which they are not fully informed, often make requisitions at too short notice, thereby causing unnecessary delays and confusion.âGL His offered solution was a relocation of the arsenal to âGla place in the northwestern part of this StateâGL selected by Major Childs. The Ordnance DepartmentâGLs response, if any, was not
